

#89 The Elemental Beings

Two elemental beings - the kind who live in your house and try to help you achieve your dreams - were whispering to a young man.

They did not talk out loud to the man the way another human would talk because they wanted to stay out of his way and let him make his own decisions. They just whispered to the back of his mind. You see, he was 21 years old and was trying to decide whether to leave the home of his mother and father and go out into the world on his own. The elemental beings were whispering to him that he should be confident in deciding - that he was a good man. They were trying to leave him free, yet encourage him. Since the decision was quite an important one, the young man was a little concerned and perhaps a little afraid. The elemental beings could see that if he decided out of fear and nervousness, he might regret his resolution. They whispered to him in feelings - not words - that said, "calm down and just start moving toward your dream." But the young man was so caught up in his mind, that he was repeating to himself, "I just don't trust that I will choose well." And the young man's inner conversation was louder than the elemental beings' inspiration.

Finally, the elemental beings of the house enlisted the help of the elemental beings of the wind, who gently blew a small gust of wind through the curtains, bringing the fragrance of another elemental being's honeysuckle vine. This got the attention of the young man, and he remembered a moment in his childhood when he was playing by the honeysuckle. In his remembrance, he had made another decision - it was about his favorite toy. He remembered how he felt supported by his parents and friends and, well, the whole world around him.

Suddenly, his mind was clear. He still did not know which way to go, but the feeling of support stayed with him, and he was already confident in the outcome.
